

Assistant City Manager Completes Ironman Race

By Tom Morgan

On July 19, thousands of athletes from around the world descended on the alpine village of Lake Placid to test their limits by participating in the Ironman Lake Placid. Included in those athletes was Brigantine’s own Ryan Hurst. Ryan, by the way, is also Brigantine’s Asst City Manager, and she has been training for the Ironman Lake Placid for over a year to test her endurance skills, both mentally and physically. Ryan previously finished the Ironman Maryland competition in 2024. Ironman Lake Placid is considered one of the most challenging full-distance races in North America. The Ironman Lake Placid competition consists of a 2.4-mile swim in Mirror Lake, a 112-mile bike ride through the Adirondack Mountains, followed by a 26.2-mile marathon run that finishes at the Olympic Speed Skating Center in Lake Placid. It should be noted that the bike ride has two loops that will rack up between

Brigantine Police Department’s National Night Out to Be Held August 4

One of the most popular summer events, the Brigantine Police Department’s National Night Out will be held on August 4th, and large crowds are expected to attend. The National Night Out is a countrywide event that enhances the relationship between neighbors and law enforcement, while bringing back a true sense of community. It provides a great opportunity to bring police and neighbors together under positive circumstances. This year’s National Night Out will be held on Tuesday, August 4th at the 26th Street Ball Field from 6:00 pm -9:00 pm. There will be a wide variety of demonstrations and activities at the event. There will be free food, new inflatable attractions for the kids, a DJ, a kids’ movie on the big screen, and a SWAT demonstration. The Brigantine Police Department

Get Hooked on Fishing Tournament Returns July 25

The Brigantine Municipal Alliance is casting a line to local families with the return of its popular “Get Hooked on Fishing, Not on Drugs” event, set for Saturday, July 25, 2026, at 24th Street. The free event is open to children ages 5 to 15, though every child must be accompanied by an adult throughout the day. Families should arrive between 8 and 9 a.m. to sign up, and organizers remind participants to bring their own fishing rod, since none will be provided on-site. The morning will kick off with a drug awareness program and table demonstration from 8 to 9:25 a.m., setting the tone for the event’s underlying message before the fishing gets underway. Children will then head to the water from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m., using hooks and bait supplied by the Municipal Alliance—a requirement organizers note 6,000 and 7,400 feet of elevation gain, and the marathon run features a grueling two-loop course. While the start of each loop is slightly downhill, every lap requires the athlete to run “up” the entire way back to town.

The back half of the marathon is famously mentally and physically brutal as they must tackle both the Olympic Ski Jump hill and the 1-mile-long Townie Hill. In order to be called an Ironman, you must finish all of the events in 17 hours or under. Over 2500 athletes representing 68 countries and 49 states participated in the Lake Placid Ironman. 90 of the competitors were professional athletes. (Continued on Page 52)

Last week’s column discussed ‘Front Porches’. This week it’s the color of your ‘Front Door’. Knock, knock—knocking on your front door. Psychologists think that the color of your front door says more than you realize. It is more than just a design choice, it’s a glimpse into your personality and lifestyle that influences first impressions before anyone steps inside.

So I thought this was worth looking into. Here are some common Front Door colors and their meanings:

Red: Red doors symbolize hospitality, boldness & energy. A red door is warm and welcoming. It shows that you are confident, outgoing, and not afraid to stand out. According to real estate data, a red door is sure to attract potential buyers’ attention but may also make it less likely they will look inside. (May need to do more research about that)!

Blue: Blue doors reflect calmness, trust, and peace. Light blue indicates a relaxed and casual beachy style. On the resale side, buyers seem to respond well to muted blues. Dark blue shows stability, confidence and a sense of tradition. According to psychologists, blue door owners are grounded people who prefer steadiness.

Green: Green represents growth, harmony, and connection to nature. It symbolizes a down to earth attitude. Designers use it with wood and stone exteriors. Black: Black doors suggest the pursuit of quiet sophistication. They show authority, confidence, & timeless style. A popular choice for those who prefer simplicity combined with strength. It has become something of a design darling over the last few years - just look at the new black & white houses around town. Analysis from Zillow found that a black or charcoal door could boost your home’s resale value.

White: White doors communicate cleanliness, simplicity, and timelessness, giving the impression of a well-kept and orderly home. A great way to keep your entrance feeling open & uncluttered.

Yellow: Yellow doors

exude energy, optimism, and friendliness, signaling an energetic and welcoming personality. It instantly brightens a home’s entry. It’s friendly, unique & full of positive energy.

Orange: Orange conveys boldness, creativity, and fun. It can indicate a risk-taker or someone with a unique, vibrant style. If you are a risk taker or just love color, this one’s for you! A great option for those who want to stand out while staying welcoming.

Purple: Purple doors are linked to creativity, flair, and mystery. They suggest a homeowner who is bold, confident, and enjoys standing out. It’s a favorite among creative & free spirits. Designers use it as a pop of personality with neutral siding.

Brown or Natural Wood: These doors reflect warmth, approachability, and a grounded personality, often giving a low-key, welcoming impression. It symbolizes stability tradition and a love for Mother Earth.

Teal or Turquoise: These shades communicate creativity, calmness, and happy energy, often paired with a sense of artistic or unique style. From a real estate perspective, the front door invites you into a person’s home, reflecting all the design & decorating choices they like. It might not be your taste but remember you can always change the ‘Front Door’ with new paint! That’s a lot to take in...so, how does your door match your personality? Let me know your impressions as you drive around town and look at your friends’ and neighbors’ ‘Front Doors’.

BrigVet Surf Camp

A veteran catches a wave during BrigVet Surf Camp at 16th Street Beach. The annual program uses surfing, wellness activities, and camaraderie to support local veterans. (Photo by Sean Kardon).

Brian Wiener grew up in Brigantine, where he learned to swim and surf as a child. When he became a young man, he joined the Navy and sometime later found himself involved in combat operations in the Persian Gulf. After discharge from the Navy, he joined the VFW and is still surfing in his free time. He realized that surfing was a great way to relax. Unwind and exercise. As a thoughtful and altruistic person, he saw surfing as a method for fellow veterans to deal with their personal struggles. Thus, the Surf Camp was envisioned. We are now entering the fifth year of the Surf Camp for Veterans.

Combat is a bad place for anyone. Often in combat, individuals are forced to make very difficult and consequential decisions. In combat, you may experience things that you wish you had not experienced. The lingering physiological and physical effects of this may be difficult for one to overcome. A condition known as PTSD or Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder may occur with varying levels of severity. When it is severe, it can lead to alcoholism, drug dependency, or even suicide. To avoid these consequences, there are various ways to relax and clear your mind. Brian believes that surfing is a great way to do just that.

The Brigantine VFW, the Brigantine Elks, the VA, and several other groups are all supporters of this endeavor. In his first year of the Surf Camp, Brian had just a couple of veterans. This is the fifth year, and there are 64 veterans in attendance, some for their second and third year. I'm pleased to report that several veterans have found surfing to be a relaxing, mind-clearing activity that they regularly do as therapy and exercise.

I made my way down to the 16th St. beach, on a beautiful Monday morning, to find Courtney Elwood, from the VA Hospital in Wilmington, DE, leading veterans in some warm-up exercises. After a short while, the veterans were instructed by Anna Jean Granlich (an Atlantic City Fireman) in some Yoga exercises. Yoga and meditation are another method to clear one's mind and relax. Soon thereafter, the veterans were offered wetsuits; surfboards and surfing lessons began. The Primal Surf Shop here in Brigantine not only assisted with their instructors; they also loaned wetsuits and surfboards to the camp. Once the lessons were completed, the veterans took their boards and went into the water. Accompanied by their instructors, they attempted surfing, most for the first time. It was fun to watch them try to ‘HANG 10’ for the first time in their lives. I noticed varying degrees of success, as they all appeared to have fun while enjoying this new experience. I mingled and spoke with several veterans in attendance. I spoke with Air Force veteran Vanessa Jenkins of Lindenwold, NJ, who indicated that she has never surfed before, but said she was anxious to give it a try. I also spoke to a Navy veteran (a young woman who will remain anonymous). As a Navy veteran myself, we spoke about some shared and common Navy experiences. She also went on to say it was difficult for her to do the exercises, and I got a little choked up when she went on to tell me of her experience. Unfortunately for her, while on a support mission for troops in the Middle East, she was severely wounded by an explosion. She currently receives 100% disability from the government because of the metal rod implanted in her back, her implanted right shoulder, her loss of some hearing and some memory...We then both agreed that life goes on, and we are grateful for each day as a blessing. I also met with Tim Fallon, a former Lieutenant in the US Marine Corps, who was blinded as a result of an explosion during combat. Remarkably, he is in his second year of surfing at Surf Camp. I am sure that there are many other stories of hardship and injury that could have been told by veterans, but as I mentioned earlier, ‘life goes on as a blessing’. I think by now you can start to understand what Brian is trying to do here: surfing as a therapy, yes! But it’s also people sharing in camaraderie, which itself is a form of therapy. The goal here is putting those awful injuries and memories aside and finding some good therapeutic activities and fellowship. The ultimate goal is healing. Often it takes a community of caring people to do so. At about 3 PM, things at the beach wrapped up for the

Brigantine Holocaust Memorial Revives

By Jordan Posner
Voice Shore Correspondent

(Reprinted from the Jewish Community Voice)

A simple phone call about a damaged statue has led to the revival of an important community tradition in Brigantine. Earlier this year, a librarian at the Brigantine Library and local Garden Club member contacted Temple Beth Shalom President Jan Sarratore with a concern: The base of the Holocaust Memorial Statue located outside the library appeared to be damaged. Fearing the worst, Sarratore immediately worried that the monument had been vandalized and rushed to inspect it. Fortunately, that was not the case. While portions of the base had crumbled, none of the pieces were missing. After documenting the damage and sharing photographs with Brigantine Mayor Vince Sera, the issue was addressed quickly. Within 24 hours, the base of the memorial had been repaired. The incident sparked a renewed interest in the history of the Holocaust Memorial Statue. Dedicated on Aug. 24, 1997, the monument was made possible through the efforts of dedicated community members who raised funds to commission an artist to create a lasting tribute to Holocaust victims and survivors. “As I learned more about the statue’s history, I discovered a program booklet from the original dedication and subsequent commemorative events, preserved by long-time community leader Gloria Jacoby,” Sarratore said. For nearly a decade following the statue’s dedication, the Brigantine Jewish community hosted annual Holocaust remembrance programs at the Brigantine Library. These educational and commemorative gatherings brought residents together to reflect on the lessons of the Holocaust and honor the memories of those who perished. Over time, however, the programs quietly came to an end. “When I learned of this history, I wondered why such a meaningful tradition had disappeared,” Sarratore shared.

Christmas in July with The Young Entrepreneurs

By The Market Media Team

It's Christmas in July at the Farmers Market! This Saturday is the 25th of July, which means we are half-way to Christmas. For those who celebrate Christmas, Hanukkah, or Kwanzaa, the holiday season can evoke a feeling of coziness and nostalgia even when it's hazy, hot & humid outside. The contrast between our traditional images of Christmas, which include snow, fire-side gatherings, and holiday decorations, and the reality of July's beach weather and ice cream is a welcome escape and a reminder that holiday cheer can be found where you least expect it. We checked in with the little Brigantine elves at the Market's "Young Entrepreneur" section. In case you haven't noticed, each week at the Market there are tables showcasing our neighborhood youth, aged 8-13 and 14-19, who are in the process of starting and/or growing their own business, which can be for-profit or not-for-profit. These budding captains of industry work through the entire process of bringing a product to market, including finding a new item or service, sourcing raw materials, producing, packaging, and finally, selling their goods. In keeping with the mission of the Brigantine Green Team and Farmers Market, the Young Entrepreneurs demonstrate a commitment to the local community by donating 10% of all profits earned at the Market to the food pantry program at Brigantine's Community Presbyterian Church.

On Market days, these young folks arrive by 7:00 am to set up and decorate their displays. They are also responsible for breaking down and removing their tables when the market closes at noon. Each entrepreneur supplies pricing charts, tablecloths, business cards, and signage to help shoppers understand the products and make their selections.

We caught up with Carter Pilch, owner of Carter's Candy Store, who sells sweet treats that actually look like other foods such as tiny hamburgers, French fries, and sodas. The inspiration for starting his venture came from his parents, both of whom are entrepreneurs. Mom, Kristin, owns and operates The Teal Tail, a women's boutique in Brigantine. Carter says his mom taught him how to "purchase wholesale and sell retail." He says they picked a product that would be different from others at the market and one that would appeal to kids. He says that the best part of being a Young Entrepreneur is making sales and earning money.

This week at the Market, look for Young Entrepreneur, Rylie Sera, and her venture "Jiingle Shells" for holiday ornaments and other home decor items made from seashells. All items are decorated with love and will remind you of days at the seashore, even in the dead of winter. Rylie's sister, Brielle, is another Young Entrepreneur who promotes her service "Beachside Babysitting" and also sells temporary tattoos.

It seems that for the Young Entrepreneurs at the Farmers Market, small business is truly a family affair!

BBCAC Artists of the Month

The Brigantine Beach Cultural Arts Commission is proud to present Stefanie and Carlos Roldan as our artists of the month for July. Stop by the Community Center to see their beautiful artwork!

Art is one of the ways we share our story.

As a husband-and-wife team, our work is inspired by the places we love, the cultures that have shaped us, and the beauty we find in everyday life. Living in Brigantine, we are continually inspired by the ocean, coastal landscapes, and the unique character of the communities that line our beaches. Much of our artwork reflects that connection to the sea and the sense of peace, wonder, and gratitude it brings.

Stefanie creates coastal-inspired wood art and mixed-media pieces that celebrate life by the water. Drawing inspiration from driftwood, nautical themes, local landmarks, and the natural beauty of the shoreline, her work is designed to evoke memories of beach days, ocean breezes, and cherished moments spent along the coast.

Carlos, originally from Ecuador, brings a perspective shaped by his heritage, travels, and appreciation for craftsmanship.

Together, we blend our experiences, cultures, and creativity into pieces that tell a story and reflect the journey we continue to share.

When we are not creating art, we enjoy exploring the Jersey Shore, traveling, learning from one another's cultures and languages, and finding inspiration in the people and places around us. We believe art has the power to connect people, preserve memories, and celebrate the beauty found in both familiar places and new horizons.

We are honored to be selected as Artists of the Month and grateful for the opportunity to share our work with the Brigantine community.

Thank you for visiting our exhibit and supporting local artists.

Brigantine’s Finest: Matt Solari

By Roseann Smith

Once in a lifetime, if you’re lucky, you find your destiny. You find what you were meant to do. Then, making a living doing it makes all the difference. You can feel it in the way you talk, the way you treat people, and the way you carry yourself through your day-to-day. You’re lighter, happier, more excited, more creative. That’s the vibe that comes cascading through when you speak to Matt Solari. Because he lives in California, I interviewed Matt by phone and was struck by how comfortable he was in his own skin and how at ease he made me feel as we spoke. Matt tells me that being a vital part of BRC Imagination Arts has led him on the journey of a lifetime.

Based in Burbank, California, BRC Imagination Arts is a unique entertainment company that brings to life “stories about the world’s most exciting challenges and the people who conquered them.” For example, one of the projects that Solari is most proud of is his work at The Museum of the Bible in Washington, DC. “We brought Bible stories to life. We worked with theological scholars and historians,” says Matt. “It’s a project that is rooted in deep scholarship, and it employed a world-class showmanship. The project was educational and theatrical.”

Theatrical? That word connects Matt with his authentic self. Born and raised in Brigantine, Solari is a 1986 graduate of Holy Spirit High School. At Holy Spirit, he participated in every play from freshman to senior year. Solari went on to major in theater at NYU, where he not only acted in “black box” theater plays such as The Merchant of Venice but also learned the behind-the-scenes aspects of theater, including set design and lighting operation.

After graduating from NYU in 1989, Matt worked on and off Broadway. “I would do anything they wanted me to do,” states Matt. “I was in charge of house seating, and I worked a lot backstage.” Matt goes on to explain that he also did temporary technology work for small businesses. One business that Solari “tempted” for was BRC Imagination Arts. His work was so impressive that the company offered him a full-time position. Twenty years later, Matt Solari serves as Vice President of Story and Creative with Brad Shelton.

Under Matt Solari’s astute guidance, the team at BRC Imagination Arts has created compelling immersive experiences like ‘Journey to Mars,’ a popular attraction at Kennedy Space Center. It’s mesmerizing, gripping, and fully interactive, engaging all your senses as you “travel” to Planet Mars and back.

BRC Imagination Arts has big plans for Solari’s next project. He’s headed to the National Railroad Hall of Fame in Galesburg, Illinois. “We’re going to tell the story of the people who built America’s Railroads,” beams Matt.

“The story of the railroad is the story of America.”

In a moment of reflection, Solari thoughtfully says, “Wherever you go in the world, you take your community roots with you. Brigantine gave me that sense of community roots.”

VFW News

There was an incredible Veteran event on the beach this week, as the Brig Vet organization hosted its Veteran Surf Camp. Some 65 Veterans were cared for through the program. The Veteran participants received instruction in surfing, nutrition, and self-care techniques. Numerous healthcare organizations were on hand to support the Veterans. Your local Post 6964 supported the event with fundraising earlier in the summer. The Post hosted a luncheon for the participants during each day of the event. No One Does More for Veterans!! Pasta Sunday continues to be a wonderful solution for those looking for a simple, delicious meal to end the weekend. No better way to end a beautiful beach day!

is both a safety measure and a condition for trophy and prize eligibility. A lunch break follows from 11:35 a.m. to noon, with a free meal provided to all participants. The event wraps up with trophies, prizes, and a closing ceremony beginning at noon, though organizers stress that children must be present for this portion of the day to be eligible for awards, while supplies last. Registered children will also receive a free T-shirt, while supplies last. Adding to the day's festivities, the U.S. Coast Guard is expected to provide a water rescue demonstration, pending availability. The event is sponsored by the Brigantine Municipal Alliance. Families with questions can reach organizers at bma-08203@comcast.net or by calling 609-266-7800, ext. 16, and leaving a message.

will have all their equipment and vehicles on full display, and the Police Hayride will also be back this year for the kids to enjoy. The Brigantine Fire Department will hold a live firehose demonstration for the kids, and the BCBP will have a Lifeguard boat and Jet Ski on hand. The Coast Guard Auxiliary will also hold safety demonstrations, and many vendors from local non-profit locations will have tables set up throughout the field. Night Out Organizer Sergeant James Powderley said, "With all the activities and presentations that will be going on, it's going to be a night to remember. We hope to see you there!"

Participants use rescue cans to tow their rescued 'victims' to shore during Junior Lifeguard Camp on July 16. The Junior Lifeguard Camp is a 5-day program aimed at introducing young participants to the responsibilities of oceanfront lifeguards.

Brigantine Co-ed Adult Softball League
Week 5 Recap
Week 5 was another great week for Brigantine’s Co-ed Adult Softball League. The second meeting of the season between Garden State and Can of Worms lived up to the hype on Monday night, featuring six innings of back-and-forth action and a dramatic finish. Garden State came out swinging behind a dominant performance from B. Foley, who went a perfect 3-for-3 at the plate with a double and a triple, consistently putting himself in scoring position and helping drive the offense. Can of Worms answered right back, as Solari delivered one of the game’s biggest highlights with an electrifying inside-the-park home run, while Corson stayed hot at the plate, going 3-for-3 with two RBIs to keep the pressure on Garden State. With the game tied in the bottom of the sixth, Thoms delivered the game-winning hit, driving in the winning run with a walk-off RBI single to secure a 7-6 victory for Garden State. Guns and Hoses took on Maynard’s for the first time this season and came away with a hard-fought 6-5 victory in a game that featured timely hitting, strong pitching, and standout defensive plays. The bats were hot for Maynard’s, with Schrieber, Taylor Sr., Maiorano, and Goodman all collecting hits to fuel a three-run first inning. Guns and Hoses answered immediately, plating three runs of their own on four hits to even the score and set the tone

After speaking with Jacoby, who had been instrumental in organizing and sustaining the original programs, and meeting with the Sara & Sam Schoffer Holocaust Resource Center at Stockton University and Executive Director Irvin Moreno-Rodriguez, discussions began about bringing the program back to the community. Those conversations have led to a revival.

On Aug. 12, 2026, the Brigantine Library and community partners will host a Holocaust Memorial Program. The event will begin at the Holocaust Memorial Statue with remarks from community leaders, reflections on the history and significance of the monument, readings, prayers, and a remembrance ceremony. Participants will then move into the library’s community meeting space for an educational program featuring Holocaust survivor and educator Maud Dahme, current chair of the

New Jersey Commission on Holocaust Education. The evening will conclude with a community reception, providing attendees an opportunity to reflect, connect, and continue the conversation. The planning committee includes Jan Sarratore, Gloria Jacoby, Rabbi Stephanie Breitsman, Irvin Moreno-Rodriguez, Rebecca Rodriguez, Camille Rosenberg, Lorna Rosenberg, John Elzufon, Frank Kern, and Brigantine librarian Kristin De Meo. Additional community leaders and supporters expected to participate include Patrick Kennedy, Mayor Vince Sera or another city representative, Mary Ann Kozack, and members of the Berkman family. Organizers hope the renewed program will not only honor the past but also educate future generations. The central message remains as relevant today as ever: Never Forget.

Chapter III

When he had seen Mother, he said it was influenza.

"Now, Lady Graveairs," he said in the hall to Bobbie, "I suppose you'll want to be head-nurse."

"Of course," said she.

"Well, then, I'll send down some medicine. Keep up a good fire. Have some strong beef tea made ready to give her as soon as the fever goes down. She can have grapes now, and beef essence--and soda-water and milk, and you'd better get in a bottle of brandy. The best brandy. Cheap brandy is worse than poison."

She asked him to write it all down, and he did.

When Bobbie showed Mother the list he had written, Mother laughed. It WAS a laugh, Bobbie decided, though it was rather odd and feeble.

"Nonsense," said Mother, laying in bed with eyes as bright as beads.

"I can't afford all that rubbish. Tell Mrs. Viney to boil two pounds of scrag-end of the neck for your dinners to-morrow, and I can have some of the broth. Yes, I should like some more water now, love. And will you get a basin and sponge my hands?"

Roberta obeyed. When she had done everything she could to make Mother less uncomfortable, she went down to the others. Her cheeks were very red, her lips set tight, and her eyes almost as bright as Mother's.

She told them what the Doctor had said, and what Mother had said.

"And now," said she, when she had told all, "there's no one but us to do anything, and we've got to do it. I've got the shilling for the mutton."

"We can do without the beastly mutton," said Peter; "bread and butter will support life. People have lived on less on desert islands many a time."

"Of course," said his sister. And Mrs. Viney was sent to the village to get as much brandy and soda-water and beef tea as she could buy for a shilling.

"But even if we never have anything to eat at all," said Phyllis, "you can't get all those other things with our dinner money."

"No," said Bobbie, frowning, "we must find out some other way. Now THINK, everybody, just as hard as ever you can."

They did think. And presently they talked. And later, when Bobbie had gone up to sit with Mother in case she wanted anything, the other two were very busy with scissors and a white sheet, and a paint brush, and the pot of Brunswick black that Mrs. Viney used for grates and fenders.

They did not manage to do what they wished, exactly, with the first sheet, so they took another out of the linen cupboard. It did not occur to them that they were spoiling good sheets which cost good money. They only knew that they were making a good--but what they were making comes later.

Bobbie's bed had been moved into Mother's room, and several times in the night she got up to mend the fire, and to give her mother milk and soda-water. Mother talked to herself a good deal, but it did not seem to mean anything. And once she woke up suddenly and called out: "Mamma, mamma!" and Bobbie knew she was calling for Granny, and that she had forgotten that it was no use calling, because Granny was dead.

In the early morning Bobbie heard her name and jumped out of bed and ran to Mother's bedside.

"Oh--ah, yes--I think I was asleep," said Mother. "My poor little duck, how tired you'll be--I do hate to give you all this trouble."

"Trouble!" said Bobbie. "Ah, don't cry, sweet," Mother said; "I shall be all right in a day or two."

And Bobbie said, "Yes," and tried to smile.

When you are used to ten hours of solid sleep, to get up three or four times in your sleep-time makes you feel as though you had been up all night. Bobbie felt quite stupid and her eyes were sore and stiff, but she tidied the room, and arranged everything neatly before the Doctor came.

This was at half-past eight. "Everything going on all right, little Nurse?" he said at the front door. "Did you get the brandy?"

"I've got the brandy," said Bobbie, "in a little flat bottle."

"I didn't see the grapes or the beef tea, though," said he.

"No," said Bobbie, firmly, "but you will to-morrow. And there's some beef stewing in the oven for beef tea."

"Who told you to do that?" he asked.

"I noticed what Mother did when Phil had mumps."

"Right," said the Doctor. "Now you get your old woman to sit with your mother, and then you eat a good breakfast, and go straight to bed and sleep till dinner-time. We can't afford to have the head-nurse ill."

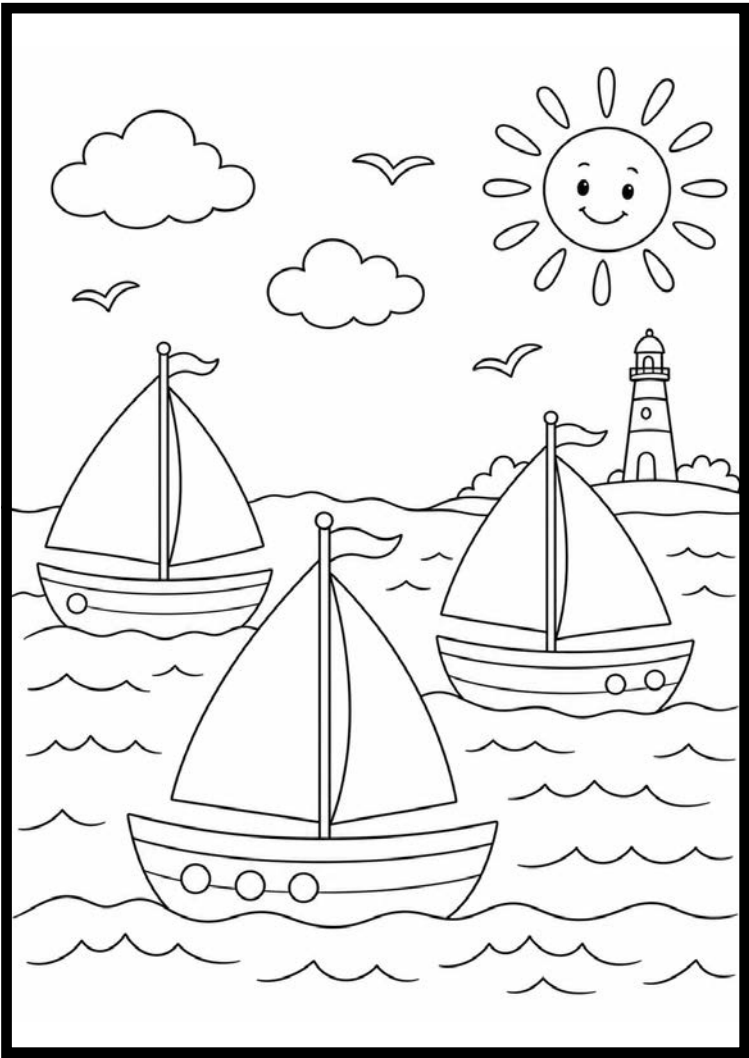

He was really quite a nice doctor.

When the 9.15 came out of the tunnel that morning the old gentleman in the first-class carriage put down his newspaper, and got ready to wave his hand to the three children on the fence. But this morning there were not three. There was only one. And that was Peter.

Peter was not on the railings either, as usual. He was standing in front of them in an attitude like that of a show-man showing off the animals in a menagerie, or of the kind clergyman when he points with a wand at the 'Scenes from Palestine,' when there is a magic-lantern and he is explaining it.

Peter was pointing, too. And what he was pointing at was a large white sheet nailed against the fence. On the sheet there were thick black letters more than a foot long.

Some of them had run a little, because of Phyllis having put the Brunswick black on too eagerly, but the words

Color in the picture of the sail boats and share your creation with us at Brigantinetimes@gmail.com

were quite easy to read.

And this what the old gentleman and several other people in the train read in the large black letters on the white sheet:--

LOOK OUT AT THE STATION.

A good many people did look out at the station and were disappointed, for they saw nothing unusual. The old gentleman looked out, too, and at first he too saw nothing more unusual than the gravelled platform and the sunshine and the wallflowers and forget-me-nots in the station borders. It was only just as the train was beginning to puff and pull itself together to start again that he saw Phyllis. She was quite out of breath with running.

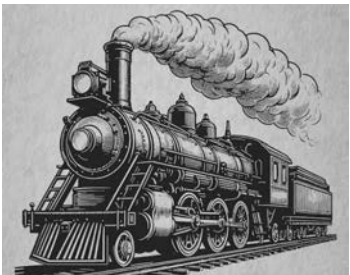

"Oh," she said, "I thought I'd missed you. My bootlaces would keep coming down and I fell over them twice. Here, take it."

She thrust a warm, dampish letter into his hand as the train moved.

He leaned back in his corner and opened the letter. This is what he read:--

"Dear Mr. We do not know your name. other is ill and the doctor says to give her the things at the end of the letter, but she says she can't afford it, and to get mutton for us and she will have the broth. We do not know anybody here but you, because Father is away and we do not know the address. Father will pay you, or if he has lost all his money, or anything, Peter will pay you when he is a man. We promise it on our honor. I.O.U. for all the things Mother wants."

"signed Peter.

Nine Elks bowled with mixed teams of Alley Kats and Stars and Stripes on July 16. The final score was 619 for the mixed team and 438 for the Vine-land Memorial Home. Our Greg bowled 145 and George 113. Ed Toland donated and installed his Great Brass Bell, which the Veterans Committee will use moving forward to assemble the veterans. Mark Milbank and John Johnson used our dear Tom Pantelena's bowling ball. The next bowling party will be on September 24. Thank you to the Brigantine Dunkin' Donuts for their support for veterans.

Leroy's Corner: Master Gardener

My humans have taken up gardening. They seem very proud of themselves because they put tiny little plants into pots on the patio and spend a surprising amount of time staring at them. Naturally, I realized they were in desperate need of a gardening expert, so I volunteered my services.

The first step in evaluating any plant is the taste test. You cannot simply trust a leaf based on appearances. Some leaves are crunchy, some are disappointingly bland, and some make your humans yell, "Leroy, no!" which usually means you have discovered one of the more interesting varieties.

My humans don't seem to appreciate my commitment to quality control, but someone has to make sure these plants are safe.

Next comes soil inspection. Humans just stick their fingers in the dirt for a second and somehow think they know everything. I prefer a more thorough approach. A few careful digs here and there help me determine the softness, depth, and overall diggability of the soil. Occasionally a little dirt ends up outside the pot, but that is simply part of the scientific process. You cannot make discoveries without a little mess.

I have also taken it upon myself to inspect the watering schedule. Every time my humans fill the watering can, I make sure to sample the water before it reaches the plants. Fresh, cool water is important, and I consider it my duty to confirm it meets my very high standards. Sometimes I even supervise while they water, just in case they accidentally forget one of the plants. They have never actually forgotten, but I like to keep them on their toes.

The plants have grown quite a bit over the past few weeks, and I think it is fair to say my expert guidance has played a major role. My humans insist that sunshine, fertilizer, and regular watering deserve the credit, but I know the truth. Without my taste testing, soil inspections, and hydration checks, this garden would never have reached its full potential.

Stay Whiskered,
Leroy

PSS PSS:

To Hooper & Brody:
Your humans are wonderfully trained, but if you really want to keep cool, try sprawling dramatically across the air conditioning vent because it is the finest summer napping spot a cat could ask for.

To Mazie: Stay strong, Mazie, and remember that the highest shelf in the house is the perfect place to supervise those dogs while collecting your well-earned extra treats.

As I write this, smoke from Canada wildfires has put a damper on outdoor activities. Please be very careful when going outside if this continues. Plan on short duration only. Hopefully this will not occur again.

The next Beach Clean-up will be on July 25 at 9:00 AM at the 16th Street Parking Lot. Remember, you will always have until Monday to do your clean-up and complete the form. Contact Fran Streeper or any Board member with questions. We so appreciate all who participate representing the BGC. Thank you.

National Night Out will be on August 4. Sending a big thank you to Johanne Milnes for stepping up to lead the event. Thanks to all who have volunteered to help. Looking forward to a fun evening.

The next general meeting will be on Monday, Aug. 3, at 6:00 PM at the Brigantine Community Center. After the business meeting, we will have round table discussions where everyone will have an opportunity to ask and answer questions. Members, YOU are the experts from your years of working in gardens. Everyone has tips to share. Be there to add to the discussions. Everyone is invited to attend; bring your gardening questions.

A new addition to the Promenade Pots will be coming soon. Be the first to notice the change.

Thank you for all that you do to bring out the best in our island home. Seen on a garden sign: You're never too old to play in the dirt.

Send mail to 3605 Bayshore Ave.; Call 609-266-7800 Ext. 29; email brigantinegardenclubnj@gmail.com ; follow us on Facebook and on Brigantine Rocks NJ also on FB; check out the Memorial Tree in the library and purchase a leaf for $75; donations are always welcome and appreciated.

erone is a loving send-up of the Golden Age musical, featuring one show-stopping song and dance number after another. Hailed by New York Magazine as “The Perfect Broadway Musical,” The Drowsy Chaperone is a masterful meta-musical and a loving parody of 1920s American screwball musical comedies that is both hilarious and poignant. It’s South Jersey’s must-see show of summer 2026. “The Drowsy Chaperone is an ingenious story about how a Broadway musical comes to life in a die-hard theater fan’s apartment and helps him find joy and purpose in life,” said director Paul Herron. “Plus it’s

Ryan was entered into the Female 45-49 Division. She completed the 2.4-mile swim in 1:20:57, the 112-mile bike ride in 8:00:53, and the 26-mile marathon in 6:36:06. Combined with transition times, Ryan finished the 2026 Lake Placid Ironman in 16:26:40. Ryan finished 44th in her division. Finishing an Ironman means completing one of the world’s most grueling single-day endurance events: a 2.4-mile swim, a 112-mile bike ride, and a 26.2-mile marathon run. Because of the massive physical and mental demand, crossing the finish line represents an ultimate test of human willpower, often requiring months of dedicated training. Participants who complete all three disciplines consecutively within a strict time limit earn the official title of “Ironman”

The Brigantine Times congratulates Ryan Hurst on earning the distinction of being called an Ironman.

A Rendezvous With Nature

By Lucille Marzano

As the newly awakened, scarlet sun emerges from the sleeping, pearl-white, winter sky, it casts a beaming heavenly glow upon the peaceful beach. The multi-million-grain sand carpet reaches out to tease the frosty, salt-capped ocean water. As I track my footprints in the coffee-brown mud, it encloses my dainty, white feet in its stationary, cement-like way. Freed from the prisonous mud by the powerful waves, I can let my thoughts flow freely with the brisk, sea-kissed winter wind. As I scan the deserted beach, I feel unique, I feel special, but the spell is broken as my eyes drop sadly to the ground, and I am only a tiny grain of sand.

Dandelions

I wonder, I dream, I cry. As the day comes to a close, my eyes squint at the incredible sight of the now fiery red sun. I watch the fireball sun burn its way into the awaiting winter sky, and the strong, salty, winter wind moves my life along with time.

The Sanderlings Have Arrived on the Island!

By Nadeem Ahsan

Small and plump and quick, their heads and backs have gone the color of rust with the breeding season, the red mottling laid over feathers that had been gray all winter.

taking the small crustaceans the water uncovers before the next wave comes to cover them once more.

finished with the nesting and the north, and they would come back through Brigantine again, thinner and paler, the red gone out of them, headed south once more to the same far beaches.

They run along the edge of the water the way they've always run, in short bursts, stopping and starting, their black legs working fast as the waves pull back and leave the sand wet and shining.

They have come a long way to be here. Some of them have flown up from as far south as Tierra del Fuego, and have stopped at our island to feed and rest before pushing on to the Arctic, where they will nest on the tundra in the brief hard summer.

And it'll go on like this, the running and the flying, for as long as they live.

Or until humans finish them off as well.

They do not walk. They run, and peck, and run again,

By August they would have

Health Tip of The Week

By Dr. J. Zimmerman

Cancer is far more common today than it was a century ago. Back in 1900, only about 5% of Americans faced it in their lifetime. Now that number sits somewhere between 30% and 50%. That kind of jump isn't just about better testing or record-keeping. It points to something deeper: the way modern food and daily habits have reshaped the internal environment of our bodies. What was once rare has become almost expected, and it's worth asking why. A big piece of the puzzle is linoleic acid, or LA, the main omega-6 fat found in soybean, corn, safflower, and sunflower oils. A hundred years ago, we got just 1% to 2% of our daily calories from this fat. Today it's 7% or more. As LA intake climbed, so did rates of breast, prostate, colorectal, and skin cancers. The trouble is that LA is unstable. When it breaks down, it forms toxic byproducts that attack your DNA, proteins, and mitochondria, the tiny energy factories inside your cells. Think of it like sparks landing in a dry forest, setting off chain reactions of inflammation your body struggles to put out. The damage runs deep. Too much LA destabilizes the inner workings of your mitochondria, lowering your energy output and leaving you tired, inflamed, and more vulnerable. It also stirs up trouble in your gut, feeding harmful bacteria while starving off the beneficial ones. That imbalance lets inflammatory toxins leak into your bloodstream and stress your

THE POWER OF VOCABULARY! Many folks imagine that Vocabulary means building a library of important or unusual words that will impress others or prove our intellectual prowess. When we substitute “fancy” words for mundane or standard words to express an idea or an opinion, ordinary words would communicate just fine. We might say he or she was pontificating when preaching, or lecturing would do. It's a personal choice that some folks choose just for fun - they enjoy using language that's more colorful & sophisticated - and others do use it to make an impression with their family, friends & coworkers. Go figure.

Here we are suggesting that most folks don't have, or use, an Emotional Vocabulary, because no one ever taught us about the power & purpose of identifying a more nuanced, verbal insight & understanding where their hopes, dreams, aspirations & feelings are concerned. Truth be told, our whole being, our whole organic nervous system, is extremely affected by the words we choose to use, and the experience, or feeling those words engender in our psychological landscape.

TALKING TO MYSELF! Here we remind ourselves that we are, whether we are aware of it or not, engaged in an ongoing, almost constant conversation with ourselves, within inside ourselves, here in the workshop of our heart, soul & mind. Our brain & our nervous system have been designed to keep us chatting away, in what may simply be defined as a Self Assessment routine, so we seldom lose touch with our present mental, physical, emotional & psychological status. We know where we are, what's going on with ourselves, how we're feeling, and what we're expecting the near & very near future to be.

As in all our lessons & suggestions for Self-Awareness, once we begin to notice our inner conversations taking place, we can listen in, guide, direct & manage this self-talk more effectively & enjoyably. Everything we recommend, everything we suggest here @ Thoughts Are Things is designed to help myself & everyone else enjoy Life - and what we have to do & accomplish in our Life - with an eye toward satisfaction, fulfillment, joy & contentment, because that's what's possible for us, that's our potential, and we can become the masters of our self & our adventures rather quickly - if we would like to have that experience.

REWRITE THE SCRIPT! Because we can think whatever thoughts we choose, why not start choosing our thoughts more creatively & affirmatively. Instead of “OMG I hate Mondays”, how about “I absolutely love Mondays, and I love every day of the week”? Seems silly, but it's a start. Until we learn to plant tiny seed ideas, tiny changes to our old habits of thought, we won't get comfortable with the idea. It costs us nothing to change our mind & cliché habits of mind, with a deliberate transplant.

When we say “Today is the very best day of my Life”, every morning, afternoon & evening, internally, or quietly to ourselves throughout the day, we are speaking the absolute truth. When we get to the end, to those final days, we will automatically realize that every day we had a day, enjoyed a day, suffered through a day was, in and of itself, the very best day of our Life, because we only receive Life, one simple day at a time. Live to be 100, and you only get 36,500 days... did you know?

HOW ARE YOU FEELING? I would answer this question with one simple word - Wonderful - because I do feel wonderful, beautiful, comfortable, at ease, in touch & in tune with myself, and my universe, all the time. I may experience moments of challenge & frustration when too many tasks pop up at the same time, usually at work, but overall I maintain a conscious enjoyment of Being Alive.

When we expand our power of self-expression - not just chit chat & yada, yada, yada (everyone does that) - but enrich our personal, emotional vocabulary with words that evoke abundance, splendor, security, simplicity, magnificence, bounty, success, wholesome joy, wisdom, intuition, growth, expansion, psychological balance, clarity, sobriety & equilibrium - we begin to stimulate our conscious & subconscious mind with an energy & atmosphere that literally reshapes our cellular & molecular anatomy. It sets our brain on fire with enthusiasm, motivation, attention to detail, and feelings of success & comprehension, without which we cannot change or improve our appreciation for & enjoyment of This Thing Called Life, exponentially. (Next Week, More Thoughts)

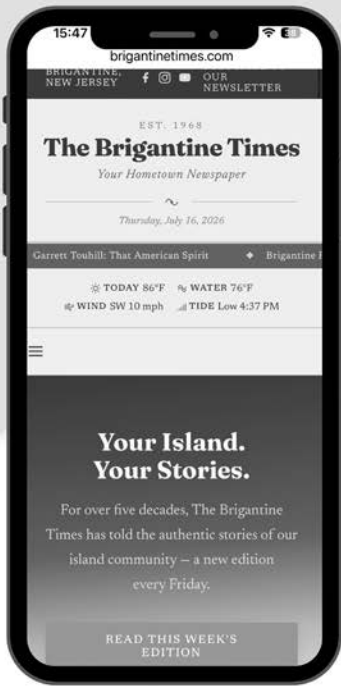

AFFIRMATIONS! (Mental & Emotional Exercise) Today I Choose Words & Self Expressions That Encourage & Uplift My Psychological Landscape, Always Reminding Myself That Life Itself, Being Alive, And Having This Miraculous Human Being & Existence Is Indeed Its Own Reward. Today I Replace Every Complaint With Praise & Acceptance, Every Disparaging Remark With An Uplifting, Life-Affirming Remark, Every Doubt, Fear, And Frustration With Declarations Of Divine Guidance, Perfection, Support & Security As Often As Necessary In Order To Keep My Mood & Frame Of Mind As Affirmative, Productive & Constructive As Humanly Possible. Today I

Remind Myself Constantly & Consistently How Wonderful, Beautiful, Sweet, Successful & Prosperous My Life Is, And I Accept This Opportunity Divine Fully & Completely With Every Breath I Take. ALL Is Well! Today I Express & Declare The Absolute Perfection Of My Life & Affairs, As I Expand My Expectations Of Good From Minimal To Maximum Success, Insight, Understanding & Love. Today Life For Me Is Absolutely Synchronistic, Harmonious, Well Balanced & Fascinating, Morning, Afternoon & Evening, And I Choose My Thoughts & Words Carefully & Wisely,

Knowing That These Words Have Power, The Power To Fulfill, The Power To Uplift, The Power To Heal, The Power To Feel Well & Very Well 24/7/365, And Beyond. Today I Declare Fully & Freely That My Life & Affairs, Both Personally & Professionally, Are Absolutely Successful, Bountiful, Abundant & Carefree, Morning, Afternoon & Evening, Right Here, Right Now, Forever & A Day. started, hinting that more companies may soon receive subpoenas. For him, the goal is simple: protect Florida families and give people the transparency they deserve about what ends up on their plates. So what exactly is potassium bromate? Bakers have relied on it for over a century to strengthen dough, lighten bread, and stretch shelf life. It remains legal here in the United States, yet the European Union, Canada, China, and India have all banned it. The FDA says the additive usually breaks down into harmless potassium bromide during proper baking, but studies in the U.K. found measurable amounts left behind in finished bread. The health concerns run deep. The International Agency for Research on Cancer labeled it “possibly carcinogenic to humans,” and decades of animal research have linked it to kidney and thyroid tumors, DNA damage, oxidative stress, and even hearing loss. Uthmeier put it plainly, calling the substance genotoxic and tied to serious cellular harm. Florida is far from alone in taking a closer look. California has required cancer warning labels since 1990 and will ban bromated foods outright starting in 2027, while New York lawmakers recently approved a similar measure. More than 20 states have introduced related legislation in recent years. The FDA authorized potassium bromate back in 1966 and never completed a modern safety reassessment, though the chemical now sits on the agency’s list of contaminants under review. Even the baking industry is shifting; the American Bakers Association has pledged to remove the additive from commercial baking by year’s end. Consumer advocate Rebekah Ricks summed up the growing push for accountability, arguing that legality “should be the baseline, not the gold standard,” and that companies knowingly selling harmful products should face consequences. Live Longer, Go to the Movies! A trip to the movies or an afternoon wandering a museum might do more for your body than you’d expect. A new study of older adults in England found that people who regularly visited cinemas, museums, and theaters had a measurably lower physiological age than those who rarely or never went. Physiological age, sometimes called biological age, reflects how worn down the body’s systems really are, drawing on markers like blood pressure, lung function, and grip strength. Frequent cultural attendees averaged a physiological age of 66.9 years, compared with 69.9 for infrequent attendees, a gap of roughly three years. What makes this so striking is that the difference held up even after researchers accounted for income, physical health, and lifestyle habits. The research, published in (Continued on Page 62)

Health Tip

the Journal of Epidemiology and Community Health, pulled from the English Longitudinal Study of Ageing, tracking 1,899 participants across 4,207 data rounds collected between 2004 and 2009. Cultural engagement was measured on a 15-point scale, based on how often people visited the cinema, a museum or art gallery, or a theater, concert, or opera. Physiological age came from ten physical measurements spanning five body systems, from the heart and lungs to metabolism and bones. The numbers told a consistent story: each one-point rise on the engagement scale corresponded with a 0.085-year drop in physiological age. A separate four-year analysis found nearly the same pattern over time, an effect earlier research suggests may be comparable to that of regular exercise. So why might a night at the theater help keep the body younger? The authors point to a few likely threads. Cultural outings tend to strengthen social bonds, and loneliness is known to speed physical decline. They may also nudge people toward healthier habits and better mental health, since chronic stress is linked to faster aging. Still, the researchers were honest about the limits of their work. People already aging more slowly may simply have the energy to get out more, the findings rely on self-reporting, and they may not carry over to other countries. Even so, the message feels worth sharing: expanding affordable access to museums, theaters, and similar venues could help more older adults enjoy these benefits. A museum visit is no replacement for medical care, but it just might be doing something real for the body as well as the mind.

If you happened to watch the British Open over the weekend you witnessed a couple of high-profile rules decisions. Bryson DeChambeau was penalized two strokes after his round for improving “conditions affecting the stroke” during play (Rule 8.1a). The R&A Rules committee determined that upon taking his stance and preparing to play his shot, Bryson trampled down the fescue grass surrounding his ball, thereby allowing him to gain an advantage in playing his stroke. Whether or not any action is deliberate or accidental, the player may not:

- (1) Move, bend or break any:
 - Growing or attached natural object,
 - Immovable obstruction, integral object or boundary object, or
 - Tee-marker for the teeing area when playing a ball from that teeing area.
- (2) Move a loose impediment or movable obstruction into position (such as to build a stance or to improve the line of play).
- (3) Alter the surface of the ground, including by:
 - Replacing divots in a divot hole,
 - Removing or pressing down divots that have already been replaced or other cut turf that is already in place, or
 - Creating or eliminating holes, indentations or uneven surfaces.
- (4) Remove or press down sand or loose soil.
- (5) Remove dew, frost or water.

Violating this rule generally results in the General Penalty (loss of hole in match play or a two-stroke penalty in stroke play).

During Sunday’s final round, Scottie Scheffler was granted relief on the 71st hole after hitting his second shot more than 80 yards left of the hole. The ball was witnessed flying into a temporary immovable obstruction (a non-permanent structure erected specifically for a tournament). Though his ball was not found at the time, he was still granted relief for his line of flight. This temporary immovable obstruction differs greatly from another scenario you would typically find on a golf course. For an immovable obstruction (an object not easily moved, such as a sprinkler box, cart path, sprinkler head, or restroom), you must find your ball, and relief is only granted if it interferes with your stance or swing, not intended line of flight.
